The prosecution introduced witnesses who saw Gillette and the girl drifting along the south bay of Big Mosse Lake at dusk. Then came the testimony of Mrs. Carey as to the scream she had Penetrating Cry.

"It was a penetrating cry, of two syllables," she said. "I listened to hear if it was repeated, but it was not. It came from the direction indicated (where Grace Brown's body was found), and it was very high pitched."

Next were introduced witnesses who next were introduced witnesses who next were introduced witnesses who hat night from Big Moose Lake toward Eagle Bay. The purser of the lake teamer Unicas said Gillette boarded the that night from Big Moose Lake toward Eagle Bay. The purser of the lake teamer Uncus said Gillette foorded the craft there and rode to Arrewhead, where he spent the night at a hotel. The defense endeavored to draw from the witnesses the fact that Gillette's clothes had the appearance of a man who had recently fallen overboard. No one noticed him closely enough to say. The proprietor of the Arrowhead Hotel said Gillette had brought down a pair of trousers to be pressed, and they apparently had been thoroughly soaked in water. The fact that Gilletto took a suit case, unbrella, camera and tennis racquet with him in the rowboat was dwelt upon by the prosecution.
